WHAT IS MY BURDEN?

There are many needs in the world. Poverty, homelessness, unreached people groups, sex trafficking, broken homes, orphans, church division—the list can go on and on. But where does God want you to focus your limited free time? What area of ministry might He be calling toward? Use the following questions to discover your unique burden—that thing or cause or people group that God wants you to focus on in ministry. Take some time to consider these questions. Print this page, or save the questions to your phone. Ask God to guide you as you see His direction for your ministry.

- If you to create a TV special about something that moves you, what would it be about?
- What magazines intrigue you most at a newsstand? What sections or articles most catch your attention?
- What biblical passages has God used deeply in your life? How have the passages shaped your view of life and the world?
- What rewarding experiences has God given you?
- How has God used you significantly in the past? (recognize that God might have used you but it not be your burden; generically I helped someone but that specific way would weigh me down)
- What are the things that make you feel the most alive when you participate in them?
- In what ways do you most enjoy serving others?
- Who are the people you find yourself voluntarily getting together with, again and again, for deeper discussions? What are your deepest discussions about?
- How would you use a million dollars if it had to be given away to a cause that moves you?
- Is there any need or problem you believe in so strongly that you'd be willing to make significant sacrifices?
